Must Support Primary Choice.

Springfield, Ill., January 30.—Representative of the organization of the Illinois Legislature with the election of a Speaker interested President-Elect Wilson greatly today.

With respect to the contest for the United States senatorship, he was told that dispatches from Illinois stated that Charles Deneen, Republican, Democratic national committeeman, might be chosen instead of J. Hamilton Lewis, who was the Democratic primary choice.

They cannot back out on the primary choice, commented Mr. Wilson. One of the correspondents inquired about the report that recognition by majority patronage had been promised to Progressives who held the balance of power in the Illinois Legislature if they supported Democrats for United States Senator.

"I have made absolutely no promises of patronage to anybody," answered Mr. Wilson.

Governor Wilson expects to begin work on his inaugural address in a few days. Asked if he had made any further plans for his inauguration, he replied that he had decided to wear a silk hat when reviewing the inaugural parade.

"I suppose I'll have to concede that much to custom," he said. The only time he ever felt uncomfortable as Governor of New Jersey, he said, was the day he wore a silk hat and sat on a horse, reviewing State troops. He has worn a felt hat on every occasion since then.

GOT SHORT-WEIGHT PIGS.

Two More Chicago Butchers Arrested for Trimming Court is Puzzled.

Chicago, January 30.—Two butchers are angry, and two customers are seeking redress for alleged short weight purchases in the form of through pigs which they bought of the butchers and Municipal Judge Sabath is in a quandary.

The court is wondering whether a man who buys a pig, paying a fixed price for the full weight, is being given short weight when the pig, which weighs less after the dressing process, is delivered to him. A case of that kind was adjudged by the Judge to give him time to consult the law.

Sigmund Rothchild and Louis Shlesinger, butchers, employed in a Milwaukee Avenue shop, were arrested on complaint of Henry Kramer and Henry DeGraw, who testified that they purchased three pigs, supposed to weigh 110 pounds each, and paid $2.75, but when the pigs were delivered they weighed only seventy-two and seventy-three pounds each.

The butchers explained that the pigs did weigh 110 pounds each when purchased, but when dressed they naturally weighed less.

This case has aroused further interest in the subject of short weight in meats which was first aroused by an Evenston woman, who caused the arrest of a butcher who, after selling her four pounds of beef, for which she paid, trimmed it down to two and a quarter pounds and sold the "trimmings" to another customer.

LANDS WON'T INTERFERE.

Deplores Indecent Invasion of Domain of State Courts.

Chicago, January 30.—Judge Landis of the United States District Court refused to entertain a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in which the municipal court of Chicago was attacked as an institution without existence in law. In his opinion he said:

"I will not lend myself to pass upon the validity of an enactment of the Legislature of Illinois when none of the State courts has been resorted to for relief. There isn't anything more unseemly than to have United States Judge presiding to annul the act of a State Legislature."

DISMANTLED AT SEA.

Steamer Comal Reports Sighting Schooner Fred Mayer.

Norfolk, Va., January 30.—Steamer Comal reports by wireless that she sighted the schooner Fred Mayer lately dismantled at sea. The exact position is not known here. The crew were all on board and declined to leave the vessel. The schooner Comal is owned by J. F. Stewart, of Gulfport, Miss.

POLICE REFUSE TO ARREST THEM

Thereupon Votes-for-Women Advocates Are Highly Indignant.

New York, January 31.—Two well dressed women suffragists, who refused to give their names, tried to include themselves among the prisoners when the police to-day arrested seven young women, among them, Miss Leonora Reilly, a votes-for-women advocate, outside a white goods factory during the disturbance in connection with the garment workers strike. The seven arrested were charged by the police with applying epithets to workers leaving the factory. The two women whom the police refused to arrest were outspokenly indignant when not taken to the station house with the others.

At another factory Miss Elizabeth Freeman, who had "votes for women," embroidered on her coat, was arrested on a similar charge, as were ten young women pickets at a third factory and seven from a fourth.

Little progress, it was reported to-day, had been made toward a settlement of the dispute between manufacturers and the United Garment Workers Union, 110,000 of whose members are still on strike.

$35,000,000 YEARLY INCOME

Enjoyed by 87 State Universities and Other State-Aided Colleges.

Washington, January 30.—Approximately $35,000,000 represents the total working income received by eighty-seven State universities and other State-aided institutions of higher education during the last year, according to a bulletin issued by the Federal Bureau of Education. Of this sum the Federal government contributed about $2,000,000, and the States $18,000,000. The regular current income of most of these institutions from public appropriations represents a definite capitalization of about $600,000,000.

The year's income passed the two-million mark in the case of the universities of Illinois, with $2,327,111; Minnesota, with $2,682,499; and Wisconsin, with $2,122,287. Cornell University, which is technically a private institution, also received State and Federal aid, reported total receipts of over $1,000,000, with a net income, available for current expenses, of about $1,500,000.

Other State-aided institutions in the million-dollar income class include the University of Michigan, with $1,342,337; Ohio, with $1,011,571; and of California, with $1,211,283. The last had an additional $500,000 from private benefactions. The State of Iowa supports several institutions of college and university rank, with a combined income of over $2,000,000.

AGRICULTURE SHOULD BE TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Columbia, S. C., January 30.—Although on the program for an address on "Education Day" at the National Corn Exposition Friday, J. D. Eggleston, former Superintendent of Education of Virginia, now chief of field service in rural education of the United States Bureau of Education, proved his versatility when he stepped into the breach made by Sir Horace Plunkett, who missed his train and spoke a day ahead of his schedule, taking the place of the distinguished Irish agriculturalist.

Mr. Eggleston will speak again to-morrow.

In beginning his address Mr. Eggleston told of a young country school teacher in Tennessee and what he had done for the farmers of his county. He taught agriculture in his school and acted as government farm demonstrator for the county. He saved $5,000 a year for the farmers by inoculating their hogs with serum, thereby completely wiping out cholera, which had long been a plague in that region. On land near the school he increased the yield of corn from twenty bushels an acre to seventy bushels, and he showed the skeptical farmers that they could grow alfalfa successfully.

"That was education of the very best sort," said Mr. Eggleston, "and we must devise a scheme by which agriculture shall be taught in that manner in the rural schools throughout the country. It is the business of the country school to teach agriculture, and it is the business of the farmer to go behind the schools and see that they do teach it."

He said the objection was raised that this was not education, and that it commercialized boys and incultured a selfish pride in them. He told of a little boy who had never seen more than $5 in his life, but who, through the agricultural science which he learned at school, was enabled to raise an acre of corn which brought him $25 in price. Without the suggestion of anybody the boy voluntarily offered part of his money for prizes to stimulate other boys to raise good corn. "I'd like to see every boy in the South commercialized in that way," said Mr. Eggleston.

Farmers were urged to adopt more scientific methods in marketing their crops by several speakers to-day. Tillers of the soil, it was declared, are the only class of people who do not get a price on their products, but are forced to accept whatever terms are offered. As a remedy for this alleged evil, it was suggested that farmers should co-operate in the direction of regulating the supply so as to stimulate the demand.

It was National Farmers Union day at the exposition and the annual winter conference of the organization convened at the grounds. Among the prominent speakers were Clarence Post-Raleigh, Dr. Bradford Knapp, Colonel E. J. Watson, Commissioner of Agriculture in South Carolina; L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee Farmers Union; E. W. Dabbs, president of the South Carolina Farmers Union; Charles S. Barrett, president of the National Farmers Union. Among the speakers to-morrow is

The principal awards to-day were the sweepstakes events in wheat. G. W. Demming, of Fairmont, Neb., won the grand champion sweepstakes. Mr. Demming also won the national sweepstakes for hard wheat, while John E. Potts, of Bea, Mo., won the national sweepstakes in soft wheat. J. F. Pollard, of Greenville, N. C., won the grand champion sweepstakes in soy beans, and Engerston Brothers, of Lake Park, Minn., in flax.

SOLDIERS ORDERED TO SHOOT STRAIGHT

They Are Told to Deal Harshly With Foreigners on Texas Soil.

JUAREZ THREATENED

Salazar Has Larger Force of Rebels, and Battle Is Imminent.

Austin, Tex., January 30.—Governor O. B. Colquitt, of Texas, telegraphed to-day to Captain John R. Hughes, in command of the Texas Rangers patrolling the Texas-Mexican boundary in the vicinity of Juarez, Mexico, to "keep me advised of the situation and shoot straight if necessary." Captain Hughes and his men were ordered to the border to protect American lives and property in anticipation of an attack on Juarez by the rebel general, Salazar.

Adjutant General Hutchings supplemented the Governor's instructions with a message directing the Ranger captain to "deal vigorously with foreign soldiers on Texas soil."

Governor Colquitt also sent telegrams to President Taft and to the War Department formally advising them that rebels were gathering near Juarez and urging that steps be taken immediately to prevent firing across the international line.

In his report to Adjutant-General Hutchings, Captain Hughes said: "Approximately 1,000 rebels under Salazar surrounding Juarez, defended by about 200 Federal Peace negotiations off. Saw rebels marching on Juarez. Probable attack in forty-eight hours. Sergeants Moore and Webster had skirmishes with rebels on island to-day. Two rebels wounded and captured, also three horses and equipment."

Additional State forces will be dispatched to El Paso and a strict patrol will be maintained from that city to the town of Fabens.

Rebels Disappear.

El Paso, Tex., January 30.—All rebel forces disappeared late to-day from the vicinity of Juarez, now reinforced beyond any fear of an attack. In addition to 200 infantry on railway patrol, trains coming in early in the day, 500 irregular cavalry under Colonel Manuel Landas, arrived to-night. More than 1,000 government troops now are in the border town.

No disturbances have been reported from along the border patrolled by United States troops out of Fort Bliss. With the El Paso-Juarez port still closed owing to the uncertainty of a railroad traffic, the United States customs department to-day closed the port of Columbus, N. M., for all entries.

CASTRO REFUSED RIGHT TO ENTER

"A Butterfly on the Wheel" Does not Spin.

In "A Butterfly on the Wheel," which was given the first of three performances at the Academy of Music last night, the changes are again rung upon the eternal triangle of a man, his wife and a servant. The story is familiar dramatic triangle, this one is not complete; two of its component sides fail to meet.

Music, again like the musical instrument, it should ring—sweet, clear and true. Possibly it did, though even that is hard to conceive, when it was played upon by an excellent cast, such as was supplied by the actors and actresses of the English Lewis Walker, when the piece was produced in New York with Madge Titherage as the butterfly wife. But, as it was played here last night, it was off pitch, not "off color" in spite of its utter frankness, but simply "jangled out of tune."

The play opens with a scene of the character so susceptible of satirization that doubtless Mr. Barrie hesitated before he rejected it in writing "A Slave of Life." If other mediums bustle about the stage and explain all that has occurred before the action begins. Through this device, the audience learns that Mrs. Admaston, wife of the Hon. George Admaston, M. P., has been decoyed by Roderick Collingwood into taking the Paris express at Bourgogne instead of the Swiss express, upon which the others of their party, Lady Atwell and Lord Ellering, have departed. Without her knowledge, since she is really only a butterfly fluttering about the candle and not meaning at all to allow herself to glow with its fire, she is left in a state of a room opening into her apartments.

After she has engaged in a needlessly long chat with a maid who has apparently been her servant since childhood, the maid departs and, at the psychological moment, the third leg of the triangle enters. An exceedingly warm love scene ensues, with all the warmth emanating from the man, while she explains that she had not really meant anything. An anticlimax in the form of a quiet sitting down before the fire follows. Then another and warmer scene of passion, when suddenly the telephone bell rings. Since the man is in her room at night and it is late telephone bell rings, he quite naturally and in the ordinary course of events, answers it himself.

Of course, it is the husband calling. Early the next morning, Lady Atwell and Lord Ellering appear and the four of them evolve a plausible explanation of the whole situation, which promptly falls to pieces before the questioning of the husband, who, since that time he has been introduced, has been a most amusing character, Lord Ellering, which supplies the only vein of humor that runs through the play, and thoroughly refreshing it is.

Suit for divorce follows, and we are shown the trial scene, concerning which there has been considerable comment.

Contrary to our practice—certainly in this State—the hearing is in open court, before not only Judge, but jury. Husband, wife and the tertium quid are all represented by counsel, all bewigged and gowned, as is the judge. The members of the jury that was seen last night made up for the part by prying into their contents, they were, for the most part, Monsieur

Sam Cahen and a detachment of his ex-soldiers of Algiers, who handle the scenery, properties and lights behind the scenes when not engaged in jury duty.

It is easy to imagine that this scene, if well played, would be most effective. It is true that the authors, Edward G. Hemmerde, K. C., and Francis Neilson, M. P., must have written the scenes in Algiers, in permitting a witness to indulge in outbursts, finally unchecked, of the character that we have learned to expect only when Italy tries the Camorristi, or France Mme. Steinheil, outbursts, charges and declamatory denials utterly foreign to our own ideas of Anglo-Saxon methods. There is also a matter of an anonymous letter addressed into evidence—but this is no brief.

On the other hand, the hectoring, caustic brutality, the badgering, the sarcasm "suggesting" that the witness is lying, all permitted under the charitable cover of the petitioners' "examination," were cleverly, even brilliantly, written into the play.

And these lines were well read by the actor, L. Broughton, who assumed the role of counsel for the petitioners. But in her replies to this long-drawn-out torture of humiliation, Esther Evans, who essayed the butterfly wife, failed to carry out the intended effect.

So it was all through the play: when she was merely a butterfly, her lack of lightness was constantly apparent and an enforced vivacity was quite insufficient to supply the desired buoyancy, while in the heavier scenes she was simply unconvincing. And upon this one character practically hangs the play.

Perival Aylmer shone in the "fat" part of Lord Ellering, playing without exaggeration and delightfully. Cecil Butler and John Davidson were only fair as the husband and the tertium quid, respectively, though Mr. Davidson's voice in itself is a valuable item of equipment. Gail Truitt was a satisfactory maid; Diana Stormont, as Aylmer stood out beyond every characterization save that by Mr. Aylmer, and Selmar Romaine, or Louis Harvey, read the bit of Lord Ellering's "man," in which he doubled, with fewer faults of emphasis than he displayed in the role of the judge. He had fewer opportunities.

This particular butterfly was one capitally souled gown. Indeed, she was not arrayed like the lilies of the field, neither did she spin with any celerity upon her wheel; she just jogged around.

Mr. Broughton's performance to-day was a performance to-day.

W. Douglas Gordon.

dent and Vice-President and Representatives in Congress. Another speaker will be Miss Lucy Anthony, niece of Susan B. Anthony, who started the movement to gain for women the right to vote for the election of Representatives in Congress. The hearing will be to urge the granting this right.

The hearing will be held at 10 o'clock to-morrow in the large committee room, on the second floor of the House office building. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Belva Lockwood, Mrs. Morton, wife of General Morton; Dr. Eleanor Folkmar, Mrs. Fred Du Bois and Mrs. Perky. Among the members of Congress expected to speak are Congressmen La Follette, Mondell, Ricker, Lufferty, French, Campbell and Hayden.

The District Suffrage League adopted a resolution at a meeting of its board of directors at 809 G Street Northwest last night to appoint a committee to confer with the leaders of the American Woman Suffrage Association, which will hold a pageant here March 3, and ascertain how both societies may co-operate with one another in the interest of a universal suffrage.

New York, January 30.—A coast-to-coast trip on horseback by woman suffragists is being planned for the spring, according to announcement to-day. It is proposed to start from this city as soon as the weather is favorable and to travel across the continent by easy stages, scattering suffrage oratory and literature through a fruitful line of States from the Rockies to San Francisco would be the route from which city the woman riders would ship their horses back by rail.

It was said at suffrage headquarters that two women had already pledged to make the unusual pilgrimage, and other women who doubted that they could qualify as "cavaliers," have agreed to furnish mounts for more able sisters. Plans, however, at present are only tentative.

Health Back After Lungs Were Affected

Sufferers from weak lungs or throat troubles the cough, colds, and other troubles, should investigate the many reports of recoveries brought about by the use of Eckman's Alterative.

Read what was said in this case:

33 B Street, Keyser, W. Va.

"Gentlemen: I was taken sick November, 1898, with a very bad cold and dizziness which I thought for about three weeks when I went to bed. The doctor then pronounced my case a mere fever and I steadily recovered. Had two consultations held over me, and the verdict was that the fever had affected my lungs."

My physician had tried most all kinds of treatment and none did me any good. So he asked my husband medicine, to which my husband told him to try anything he thought would do me any good. So I began taking Eckman's Alterative on November 22, 1898, and by February 2, 1899, I was able to leave my bed and was able to do my usual work. I am now a healthy woman and I advise all people with lung trouble to give it a good trial."

(Signed) MRS. K. E. BAILEY.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung troubles and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all leading druggists. Ask for booklet of testimonials and write to Eckman Laboratories, Philadelphia, Pa. For additional evidence.—Adv.
